Parasitoids develop at the expense of a host and cause its death. They are very effective at fighting crop pests. They are small in size (1-2 mm) and difficult to see in the field.